

Statement of Record

On September 5, 2025, I had a scheduled phone call with Osborne Homes, a company based in Fresno, California with offices in Lodi and other locations, regarding my property known as the castle in Sonora, California. During this call: - Osborne Homes asked me directly if I had a mortgage on the property. I truthfully answered: No, I do not have a mortgage. - The representative ran her checks during the call. She stated she was reviewing Zillow and other property websites for details, and she also checked their internal system for any mortgage, deed of trust, or lien of record. - She did NOT identify or mention any mortgage, deed of trust, lien, or encumbrance connected to the property. - At no point was Freedom Mortgage, MERS, or any other lender or entity mentioned. - Osborne Homes proceeded to make me a cash offer of $265,000 for the property. - A corporate buyer would not have extended a cash offer if their search had revealed an active mortgage encumbrance, since any payoff would be required at closing. - Therefore, the fact that Osborne Homes proceeded to make an offer confirms that their check of available records did not reveal any outstanding mortgage or lien on the property. This conversation validates the independent searches I have already made through county records and other sources, which also showed no active mortgage or lien attached to the property.
